Land Acknowledgement and Recognition

Before we can talk about sociology, power, inequality, we must acknowledge that the land on which we gather is the traditional and unceded territory of the Lenape (pronounced len-ah-pey, meaning Original People). The American Sociological Association (ASA) acknowledges that academic institutions, indeed the nation-state itself, was founded upon and continues to enact exclusions and erasures of Indigenous Peoples. This acknowledgement demonstrates a commitment to beginning the process of working to dismantle ongoing legacies of settler colonialism, and to recognize the hundreds of Indigenous Nations who continue to resist, live, and uphold their sacred relations across their lands. We also pay our respect to Indigenous elders past, present, and future and to those who have stewarded this land throughout the generations.

Welcome to the 121st Annual Meeting of the American Sociological Association! I am delighted to gather in New York City - a diverse and global city that's long been at the forefront of social, political, and economic change. The theme of this year's conference, Disrupting the Status Quo: Putting Sociology to Work for a More Equitable Society, challenges us to dream big, and there is no better place to dream big than in the city widely known as the "City of Dreams."

Many of us were drawn to sociology because we wanted to make a difference in the world. But as a discipline, we have primarily focused on understanding how social problems are produced, which has left us with less to say about how to ameliorate them. The themes of this conference focus our attention on advancing a more publicly engaged sociology to develop and test theories of change with the goal of identifying research-based solutions for social progress. By bringing together scholars, practitioners, policy makers, and community members, the conference asks how sociology can better leverage research methodologies, lived experience, and collaboration to drive meaningful social change.

We have an exciting program planned to address these topics and more. Plenary sessions will explore different strategies and approaches to social change, such as the role that humor, pedagogy, and research partnerships can play in changing minds, shaping policy, and having an impact more broadly. Two presidential sessions will focus on "Bridging Scholarship and Struggle: The Long Arc of Community-Engaged Sociology" and "Putting Sociology to Work in Research Funding." Section sessions, thematic sessions, special sessions, book panels, and regular sessions will offer important opportunities for deeper conversations and debate, fostering new insights and a revitalized sociological imagination. Finally, we have a fantastic lineup of regional spotlight sessions showcasing the sociological landscape of New York City from gentrification to immigration as well as local tours such as the Village Pride Tour. Thank you to the local planning committee comprised of Lynn Chancer, Thomas DeGloma, Tey Meadow, Tsedale Melaku, Van Tran, and chaired by Kathleen Gerson and Mignon Moore, for their invaluable contribution and thoughtful programming.

The annual meeting is always a heroic group effort. I'd like to extend my heartfelt appreciation to the many people who have worked so hard to make this a successful event. Thank you to the program committee members for their incredible effort, creativity, and support. Collaborating with Victor Ray, Laurel Westbrook, Nina Bandelj, Bailey Brown, Celeste Campos-Castillo, Erin Cech, Lisette Garcia, Krystale Littlejohn, Ruth Lopez Turley, Jennifer Randles, and Rashawn Ray turned a daunting task into an energizing and enjoyable experience. I am deeply grateful to the ASA staff and especially ASA Meeting Services Director Heather Young and Executive Director Heather Washington for going above and beyond in their support of the ASA's mission this year. The ASA meeting planning begins with lots of big dreams and wide-ranging ideas. It is the ASA staff that turns these dreams into the organized, well-run meeting that we all experience.

We are living through a difficult time marked by attacks on sociology and academic freedom, growing skepticism toward science, and divisions within our discipline itself. It can be hard to be optimistic. Yet, as we gather in community together, I want to encourage us to have hope - to imagine a better future and to put sociology to work to achieve it.

Please take in all the incredible things New York City has to offer, enjoy the meetings, reconnect with old friends, and I hope this time together strengthens your commitment to the promise of sociology and the positive impact it can have in the world.

Daniel Cueto-Villalobos is a PhD candidate in sociology at the University of Minnesota Twin Cities. He earned his BA in urban studies at New York University. His dissertation examines how religion shapes racial attitudes and collective responses to inequality across issues of policing, immigration, and redistributive policy.

Akilah Marie Favors is a PhD candidate in sociology at the University of California, Berkeley, where she also earned her MA. She received her BA in sociology at Spelman College. Her dissertation draws on ethnographic, interview, and content analysis data to examine how Black-led nonprofits navigate and contest the restrictive neoliberal market of gentrification through interclass solidarity, institutionalizing resistance to longstanding structural and cultural drivers of Black urban displacement.

Deonté M. Hughes is a PhD candidate in sociology at the University of Maryland, College Park. He earned his BA in sociology at Longwood University and his MA in sociology at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. His dissertation examines how the effects of kinship bonds on the well-being of Black families differ across social contexts over time.

Deziree Jackson is a PhD candidate in sociology at Indiana University Bloomington and a Graduate Fellow at the Irsay Institute for Sociomedical Sciences Research. She earned her BA in sociology from the University of Mary Washington and her MA in sociology from American University. Using mixed methods that integrate archival records, biomarkers, survey data, and in-depth interviews, her research examines how structural racism becomes embedded in places and environments, shaping racial inequalities in health and biological aging across time and place.

Sione Lynn Pili Lister is a PhD candidate in sociology at Arizona State University. She earned her BA in sociology from University of Washington and her MA in sociology from University of Arizona. Focusing on the U.S. Territories, her dissertation employs culturally informed conversations to explore the lived experiences of territorial status, with a focus on migration, racialization, and world-building practices.

Emilia Ravetta is a PhD candidate in sociology at Colorado State University. She earned her BA in Argentina from the University of Buenos Aires and her MA in applied sociology from Northern Arizona University. Her dissertation combines ethnographic research and in-depth interviews to examine the social impacts of lithium extraction in Argentina, with a focus on community relationships, past and future imaginaries and socio-environmental justice.

ASA Minority Fellowship Program (MFP)

ASA's Minority Fellowship Program was founded in 1974. To date, the program has supported more than 500 students in pursuit of a doctoral degree in sociology. Areas of interest for Fellows include social psychology, gender and sexuality, education, medicine and health, inequalities and stratification, race and ethnicity, and more.

MFP seeks to attract talented doctoral students to ensure that a diverse and highly trained workforce is available to assume leadership roles in the discipline and conduct research that is relevant to today's global society.

Presider: Shelley J. Correll, Stanford University

Panelists: Blythe Roberson; Lauren Feldman, Rutgers University

Session Organizer: Shelley J. Correll, Stanford University

In this plenary session, ASA president Shelley Correll will be in conversation with comedian, humor writer, and author, Blythe Roberson, about her recent book “America the Beautiful? One Woman in a Borrowed Prius on the Road Most Traveled.” Roberson’s book is a sharp, funny, and deeply perceptive travel narrative about visiting America’s national parks—made all the more striking by how rare it still is for women to write in this genre. Her book offers incisive sociological insights into racism, sexism, colonization, and climate change, all while making you laugh (sometimes uncomfortably so). Joining the conversation, Professor Lauren Feldman—co-author (with Caty Borum) of A Comedian and an Activist Walk into a Bar: The Serious Role of Comedy in Social Justice—will reflect on the unique role of humor and comedy in illuminating injustices and offering vehicles for social change. Set in New York City, a legendary home of comedy, this session embraces the idea that humor is not a distraction from serious analysis, but one of its most effective tools. Free copies of the book, “America the Beautiful?” will be available for the first 80 attendees.

Community-engaged scholarship (CES), that is, research conducted in deep collaboration with communities striving for social justice, offers a powerful alternative to extractive or top-down approaches to social inquiry. Grounded in collaboration, accountability, and shared purpose, CES positions sociologists as co-creators of knowledge and agents of change. Though historically undervalued in the discipline, this approach has deep roots in American Sociology and is gaining renewed recognition, as reflected in the ASA Council's recent adoption of guidelines for including community-engaged scholarship in tenure and promotion cases. Building on this momentum, this session examines how CES is reshaping the field by advancing equity-oriented research, democratizing knowledge production, and strengthening communities' capacities to challenge systemic oppression. Panelists will highlight action-based research that links sociological inquiry to transformative equity-oriented policy and institutional change. The session aligns with the annual meeting's theme of solutions-oriented sociology that responds to the pressing challenges facing both the academy and democracy at large.

Presider: Shelley J. Correll, Stanford University

Panelists: Rosabeth Moss Kanter, Harvard Business School; Monica Prasad, Johns Hopkins University; Michelle Jackson, Stanford University; Adina Sterling, Columbia University

Session Organizer: Shelley J. Correll, Stanford University

Sociology excels at diagnosing social problems—but what would it mean to focus on solving them? This plenary session brings together scholars who teach and write about how to advance social change. What is the value of interventions and nudges relative to larger scale change? Can we effectively tackle a castle head on? What approaches are most effective? Can teaching sociology inspire learners to strengthen communities and create more equitable organizations? Panelists will explore how social scientists can mobilize theory, research, strategy and pedagogy to move beyond diagnosing problems to create lasting social change. This session encourages sociologists to envision a better world and reflect on what it would take to make that vision a reality.
